Where does the name "Web Android" came?

The term "Web Android" doesn't appear to be a widely recognized or established term within the technology industry or Android ecosystem. It's possible that the term has emerged or gained significance after that time. However, based on the context you provided earlier, it seems that "Web Android" refers to the concept of using web technologies, particularly Progressive Web Apps (PWAs), in conjunction with the Android operating system. This concept involves creating web-based applications that can be accessed and used on Android devices through web browsers, offering native app-like experiences, offline capabilities, and other advantages.
